OVER 100 PERISH AT SEA; MANY BEING FROZEN TO DEATH.

Steamer Bound From Boston to New York Collided With Schooner Off Block Island This Morning.

BUT VERY FEW WERE SAVED

In One Boat That Reached Shore
There Were Eight Living and Fourteen Dead, Latter Freezing After Removal from Steamer.

PUBLISHERS' PRESS TELEGRAM.
NEWPORT, R. I., Feb. 12.—The steamer Larchmont, of the Joy line, bound from Boston to New York, sank off Block Island last night, after colliding with the schooner Harry Knowlton. Several passengers are reported lost. The Knowlton sank almost immediately, while the Larchmont remained afloat for some time following the crash. It is believed the Knowl-ton's crew escaped in small boats.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 12.— Probably 130 people perished at sea off Quonehontang Beach, Block Island in the collision between the Larchmont and Knowlton early this morning. Of the steamer's crew of forty men and 100 passengers, only a single boat has reached the shore, containing eight living men and fourteen corpses. How the collision occurred is not yet known.

WATCH HILL, R. I., Feb. 12.—There were about 100 passengers aboard the Larchmont. Only six or seven were saved. Word has been received here that eighteen bodies have been washed ashore on Block Island. The Knowl-ton's crew was rescued. Of two boat loads landing at Block Island early today, all but half a dozen in the boats were frozen to death. A late report says there were 150 people aboard and possibly more.

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN"

Was the Subject of E. C. Higbee's Address at High School, Taking Judge Reppert's Place.

Attorney E. C. Higbee delivered an oration on "Abraham Lincoln" at the High School today. Judge E. H. Reppert had been invited, but there being a session of court, he was unable to attend. Mr. Higbee's address was not only an excellent one from a historical standpoint, but was also a model of oratorical delivery.

The talk was greatly enjoyed by the students. Short services were held at the High School this morning in commemoration of the day.

Aside from the exercises at the schools Lincoln's birthday was not observed in Connellsville except by the banks, which are closed.

MIGHT BE MURDER.

Suspicion Arises That John Collins Did Not Freeze to Death, But Was Killed.

UNIONTOWN, Feb. 12.—The suspicion has arisen that John Collins, who was found dead in a field back of Ol-ver one day last week, did not freeze to death, but was assaulted. The ground in the vicinity of where he was found indicated that a struggle had taken place. A bruise on the back of Collins' head also looked suspicious.

When he left home Collins had $15, but when his body was found there were but two cents.

ANOTHER EARTHQUAKE

At Kingston Kills Ten Men Last Night and Does Much Damage to Property.

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY COURIER.
KINGSTON, Feb. 12.—In the heaviest earthquake shock since the destruction of the city ten men were killed last night and a number of buildings, already shattered, were tum-bled to the ground. The government headquarters house sustained serious damage. It is no longer habitable.

THAW TRIAL.

Dr. Evans, Alienist, Testified This Morning As to An Examination
He Made of Prisoner.

PUBLISHERS' PRESS TELEGRAM.
NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Harry K.
Thaw's 30th birthday anniversary today was remembered by all his relatives and many friends. Their tokens were sent to the Tombs and he had a busy time examining the packages before he was called to court. When he reached the prison pen his wife was there to greet him. She congratulated him on the occasion. It was with earnest mien that she wished him many happy returns of the day.

Dr. Britton D. Evans, Superintendent of the New Jersey Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains, N. J., was the first witness at the Thaw trial today. Judge Deland's questions were met by sustained objections by Deland. His "observations" of Thaw were that he exhibited peculiar facial expressions, a glassy stare, and a stare of the eyes, but an unusual suspicion of every one about him and that he had delusion of personal character, having an exaggerated idea of his own importance, believing that he was the victim of persecution which made his role that of a martyr.

Dr. Evans explained at length the evidence of mental unbalance he had discovered in Thaw. On his second visit to Thaw in the Tombs, the witness declared Thaw was even so insane as to tell him, an expert, how to conduct the examination. This was too much for Thaw, who stabbed a law book and plunged his nose in the pages, apparently very deeply interested. Dr. Evans stated that Thaw was a victim of delusions. He declared, "After I had observed this much, Thaw dismissed the physicians and entered into an excited discussion with the attorney."

"I object," declared Jerome, and the old wrangle over the defendant's line of testimony was again opened. The squabble lasted almost an hour. Jerome objecting to the testimony on Thaw's insanity that hinged upon oral statements by Thaw. The witness resisted subsequent visits on two of which he had found Thaw the same Evans was the only witness of the morning session.

COLD WEATHER.

Mercury This Morning Was Down
Close to the Zero Mark—Streets Covered With Ice.

The cold weather continues. This morning was one of the coldest of the winter, although the mercury did not drop to the limit reached last week.
At 8 o'clock a sharp frost degree was registered, while it was lower than that earlier in the day. It began to get cold Monday evening, and by midnight the mercury had dropped to 12 degrees.

This morning the streets were unusually slippery. The frozen snow crunched loudly beneath the feet, while wagons caused it to make a noise not unlike that of wet mud. These peculiar noises from the snow were more pronounced this morning than at any time heretofore this winter. Horses found it difficult to travel. Brimstone Corner was an especially dangerous locality, and a force of reservists stood in that vicinity to help push stranded wagons over the hump.

The Youngbushy river is gradually becoming frozen. The stream is very sluggish, and if this weather continues for a day or so longer it is possible that there may be skating on that stream in the near future.

PRIMARY DECISION.

Judge E. H. Reppert Upholds Opinion of Commissioners in Disputed Case at Uniontown.

UNIONTOWN, Feb. 12.—Judge Reppert this morning, in a lengthy decision, settled a case of expectation concerning the now Union Primary Law which has been causing no little confusion in this county. This decision was the suit of George Ma-ge of Uniontown against the Fayette County Commissioners. Mage was a candidate for the nomination of Town Council at Uniontown on the Democratic ticket. L. N. Beighley, L. W. Fogg and J. A. Strickler were the Republican aspirants. Strickler and Fogg won out, and when the Democratic ballots were counted it was found that many voters also wrote Strickler's name on their ballots.

Mage was the only Democratic candidate, although there are two in candidates. He objected to Strickler's name being placed on the Democratic ticket. The Commissioners were of opinion that Strickler's name was entitled to be placed on the Democratic ticket as he had received sufficient votes to nominate him. Judge Reppert concur in the opinion of the Commissioners and Strickler's name will go on the ballot as a Democratic candidate.

THE HOUSE TRIAL ON AT GREENSBURG.

Case Against the Smithfield School Principal Attracts Much Attention.

COURT CROWDED YESTERDAY.

Many Witnesses From Fayette County
Have Been Subpoenaed—All Day Yesterday Was Taken Up In Securing a Jury—Trial Started Today.

Special to The Courier.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 12.—Criminal court room was crowded to the doors today when Prof. W. R. House of Smithfield, Principal of the public schools there, went on trial before Judge McConnell for an alleged attack upon Miss Clara Baker on St. Clair avenue on November 15.
The afternoon, when a jury was finally selected and the case opened standing room was soon at a premium, and when Miss Baker went on the stand the corridors were crowded with the curious. The case was set for the morning. The case setting, in interest and importance, many curious onlookers were present, and the interest promises to continue until the jury returns its verdict. Opinions as to the outcome were here. The courthouse was an arena of circumstantial evidence in addition to the identification by Miss Baker, and Mall Carter James G. Reed, but the defense has considerable doubt to work on for effect on the jury. Captain John B. Keenan has long been known as Greensburg's leading criminal lawyer. He and P. K. Shiner were surprised today when D. C. Ogden, weak in convalescence from an attack of appendicitis, took his place at the defense table. The trial is the case that money can pick up here in a household.

All fourteen spectators were taken for a street car for a jury. The jurors, arranged, are principally from that portion of Westernland county near the Fayette line. Among them are: Jacob L. Graft, East Huntingdon township; Elias Hoffer, Scottdale; Jos.
C. Kenny, Scottdale; George Marks,
Mt. Pleasant township; and E. A.
Spanier, Hempfield township.

Assistant District Attorney C. C.
Crowell opened for the Commonwealth when the jury had been selected. He told how, on the night of November 15, 1906, while Miss Baker was returning to her sister's home after work in a department store, she was stopped in dark St. Clair avenue by a man, who asked her the name of the street.
Before she could answer, he threw an arm around her, tried to throw her down and then, with his other hand, plunged a knife into her neck.
She screamed as the blood spurted over her clothes and ran towards a corner light. Mall Carter Reed was nearly and hurried to her assistance.
Both saw the assailant under the light, and both say it was House.

Miss Baker was taken to the Westmoreland Hospital, where she recovered in two weeks. Sheer lack saved her life, for the wound was only a quarter inch from the superior carotid artery, which, if cut, would have caused death.

An hour afterward House, waiting for a street car for Uniontown, was arrested. He admitted that he was at the scene of the crime, but insisted that he was not guilty of the assault,

Litigation.

SHORT LINE CASE IS DECIDED

Also Against Dr. G. W. Gallagher and Lloyd Johnston—Exceptions Overruled Protesting Against Damage Bonds of Mountain Water Supply Co.

UNIONTOWN, Feb. 12.—Judge Reppert, in court this morning, handed down a decision directing that judgment in favor of the plaintiffs be entered in the suit of John Humbert, T.
Scott Dunn and Hamilton Bryson, Trustees of the United Presbyterian Church of Laurel Hill, against Kell Lombard and Joseph Long, executors of the will of the late James M. Long, of Franklin township. The amount involved is $100,000, which was bequeathed to the trustees by the decedent.
The executors refused to pay the amount, and the trustees sought judgment to compel them to do so.
The case was argued by the attorneys for both sides, and the court has now rendered its decision.

A decision in favor of the O. & R.
Short Line against Dr. G. W. Gallagher and Lloyd Johnston has been rendered.
This was an action in replevin to recover tools and portions of a railroad track which were taken from the right of way passing through the Dunbar township farm of the defendants.
The executors of the Mountain Water Supply Company to bonds filed by the Indian Creek Valley Railroad Company to cover damages which might occur through the construction of their road have been overruled. The bonds are declared to be in sufficient sum by the court.

The report of the viewers, recommending a bridge be built across Little Sandy Creek in Henry Clay township has been approved by the court.

Murphy & Company of Scottsdale have entered suit against L. R. Eicher, executor of the late Martha Jane Eicher, of Upper Tyrone township, to recover $100 funeral expenses.

Attorney H. A. Colton has been appointed mediator in the divorce proceedings of J. A. Sanders against Louis Sanders. Divorces have been granted Carrie Bell Perry of Uniontown against Charles R. Perry and James W. Morris against Dora M. Morris.

Unless exceptions are filed within 20 days, the defendants' demurrer to the case entered by John B. Smith, of Brownsville against George W. Jan-hart and others to secure an accounting, will be overruled. This suit is to secure an accounting with the defendants in the real estate business and they never made any accounting of the receipts of the firm.

tiary for a year and eight months on peared on the scene from the old country, cutting Mike's sweet dream sud-brother Harry Patrick of Boscawen were arrested yesterday, charged wife of Edward Patrick.

At the time of the murder it was believed that Mrs. Stauffer was killed to prevent her from making a charge of negligence in her will in favor of her grandchildren, because none of the valuables about her were disturbed.

Parents do not seem to realize the great importance of curing nervousness in their children. They fall in a doctor for a cough or a cold, but nervousness does not strike them as being serious enough. #### CATARH GROWING LESS.

Due to the Use of Hyomel—Cures Without Stomach Dosing.

There has been a marked falling off of sales of a cathartic cure in the local stores for the past year. Strictures which were formerly purchased in gross lots are now seldom called for, and the druggist rarely buys more than a dozen at a time.

Hyomel is a notable exception to this decrease in sale. It is being largely resorted to for the treatment of catarrh of the bowels, as it has cured so many people of catarrh troubles that naturally there is less call for remedies for that disease.

There is no disagreeable stomach dosing with Hyomel. It is breathed through a nose pocket, inhaler that comes with every Hyomel outfit.

A Clark gives his personal guarantee that the money will be refunded unless the treatment cures, so that you run no risk at all in buying this reliable remedy.

The complete Hyomel outfit costs but $1, extra bottles, if needed, 50c.

BOERS WIN ELECTIONS

British Laborites John Dutts and De-fact Mine Owners.

Johannesburg, Transvaal, Feb. 12.—The first elections of parliament under the new Transvaal constitution will be held Feb. 23 with every prospect of the Boers obtaining a useful working majority in the house of representatives.

The nominations for 69 seats occurred Feb. 8 and Monday 10 Het-volk, or (Dutch party) candidates were declared elected unopposed. These include ex-President Schalkenberg and General Delany and Erasmus.

The campaign has been a straight fight between the Progressives (British party) and the Hetvolk. The latter secured the support of a number of British labor men, mine workers, who are opposed to Chinese labor, while the Progressives were largely under the leadership of the mine owners.

Sir Richard Solomon, former lieutenant governor of the Transvaal, has joined the Hetvolk and probably will be the first premier.

STEVE ADAMS ON TRIAL

Scheme to Fasten Crime on Unlabeled Officials in Operation.

Wallace, Idaho, Feb. 12.—The trial of Steve Adams, implicated by the confession of Harry Orchard with the assassination of former Gov. Steunenberg, on a charge of murdering Fred Tyler, a settler, has begun. The section of a jury is expected to convene for 10 days or two weeks.

Tyler disappeared from his timber claim on Marble creek about August 10, 1904. His body was found later but his murder remained a mystery until after the death of Gov. Steunenberg.

Harry Orchard's graphic confession of the assassination of Steunenberg, not only implicated Steve Adams and other members and officers of the Western Federation of Miners in the governor's murder, but declared that Adams and Jack Simpkins killed Tyler because he had taken up a timber claim. Simpkins has not been found by the police.

Adams was arrested at Haines, Ore., on Feb. 20, 1906, and taken to Boise, where, it is alleged, he confessed the Tyler murder. This confession he now denies; and, it is believed, he will say that it was wrong from him by force and is false. Later Adams was brought from Boise to Wallace, Sheriff Sutherland leaving the railway and journeying by wagon to avoid the service of legal papers to take the prisoner from him.

This trial is the first step in the legal attempt to convict the leaders of the Western Federation of Miners of the murder of former Gov. Steunenberg. This Federation will fight the case, asserting that the charges are false, being concocted by mine owners to break up the Federation.

RAILWAYS AND TROLLEYS.

The railroads are not going to submit to State regulation generally, nor the fixing of passenger rates specifically, nor the extension of the right to carry freight and the right of eminent domain to the trolley companies. President Baer of the Reading in an open letter to the Legislature. He stands upon his company's chartered rights, and he further declares that all railroads chartered prior to 1857 have the right to charge such rates as are fixed by their charters.

This is a legal question which may be illuminated by a decision of the courts. A more interesting one is that raised in the statement that the Reading railroad lost half a million dollars last year in carrying passengers. Similar complaints are made by other railroads. If it be true that the passenger business is unprofitable, why do the railway companies insist upon keeping it from the trolley systems, which have proven their entire ability to handle local traffic with greater dispatch, less cost to the people, and more profit to themselves than the steam railway companies will admit is possible to them?

It is natural and perhaps proper for the steam railways to resist the "regulation" of their business by the politicians, but if they cannot conduct the passenger business with profit one would think they would gladly turn it over to the trolley systems when and wherever they can.

But we find them all arrayed against the trolley bills, all represented at the hearing before the Railways Committee of the House by eminent legal talent, sent there to tell the legislators that the proposition is unconstitutional and that its effect would be to make the last condition of the trolley companies worse than the first.

CRIME IN SOMERSET COUNTY.
The industrial development of Somerset county has been attended by the inevitable lowering of the moral standard and an increase in the criminal business of the courts. The simple life has been changed for the strenuous, and the honest folks have been mixed up with evil people.

A man is in jail charged with murdering the husband of a woman that he might enjoy her himself without disturbance, and now two brothers are charged with murdering a female relative to prevent her making discriminations in her will in favor of her grandchildren.

Such crimes, if proven, are the kind that call for the rope. Truly, Somerset's development has developed some evil with the good.

ANOTHER WABASH STRAW.
It is true that the coke region community of railway interest is trying to purchase the Indian Creek valley railroad in order to prevent its falling into the hands of the Wabash. We may not unreasonably conclude that the peace with Gould that means the paralysis of Wabash railway projects in this section has not been definitely concluded, and that there are still hopes for another competing railway system in the Connelleville coke region.

In the meantime, it is evident that the Connelleville, Scottdale and Mt. Pleasant people who have taken over the Indian Creek railway project have cornered some handsome possibilities.

Greene county's District Attorney is being prosecuted primarily for some alleged crimes of his own, but incidentally for having prosecuted other people for other crimes. When bad men air their quarrels in court, they usually get what is coming to them. Were better for them if they fought out their differences in the old-fashioned way as far from the Court House as they could get.

Scottdale is still the Frick center of the coke region.

Variety is the spice of life, but there is just a little too much spice in this winter weather.

Latrobe is in the grasp of the grip. We extend our sympathy. When Latrobe people are not scourged with water microbes in the summer's torrid weather, they are hit up with the influenza insect that thrives in the biting winter atmosphere.

Congressman Cooper is making a few more Fayette county postmasters. It is a pleasant occupation, but without at times most perplexing.

The B. & O. can't get its tax assessments assessed West Virginia. It is very easy to add more to valuations, but next to impossible to have anything taken off.

Selling liquor is a serious crime in Greene county, but debauching the ballot is universally condoned.

The merchants do well to honor Lincoln. He was a friend of all the storekeepers in Somerset county. In his day the store was the forum of local debate wherein the fate of the nation was settled. It had much to do with settling it both there and thereafter.

Disasters at sea do not often happen, but when they do death reaps a rich harvest.

TROLLEY FREIGHT BILL'S HEARING.

Speeches Made Against Sterling Act by Railroad Representatives.

D. W. McDONALD FOR B. & O.

Claim Made That All Trolley Roads Under the Law Would Be Compelled to Carry Freight and That Would Be Hardship on Some of Them.

Special to The Courier.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 12.—The line along which the fight against the trolley freight bills which have been introduced in the Legislature by B. F. Stirling of Fayette and other members will probably be made was disclosed at the public hearing on the Railroad Commission bill before the House Railroad Committee Monday afternoon.

William I. Schaffer of Chester, reporter for the State Supreme Court, appeared with counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. In the course of his remarks, he declared that if a trolley freight bill be enacted every such electric railway in the State will have to carry freight, whether it desires to or not. He said that it will have to do this because it is a common carrier and must obey the law.

This is a new proposition to many of the legislators and caused a lot of talk about Capitol Hill today. Mr. Schaffer also said that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in the course of its remarks, he declared that if a trolley freight bill be enacted every such electric railway in the State will have to carry freight, whether it desires to or not. He said that it will have to do this because it is a common carrier and must obey the law.

The hearing in question was the first of a series which will be held. The railway representatives consumed most of the three-hour session. Another hearing will be held in a few days at which the advocates of the measure will speak and then the railroads will be heard in rebuttal.

The array of counsel present was imposing. Ex-Attorney General William C. Heusel spoke for the Reading railroad interest, and D. W. McDonald, Esq., of Uniontown for the Baltimore & Ohio. Mr. Schaffer spoke for the Pennsylvania and speeches were made by several other railway attorneys. S. N. Williams of Pittsburgh, Secretary of the State Board of Trade, was present in the interest of the bill, but the only speech made in its defense was that of Representative Dunsmore of Tioga, author of the bill which will likely be reported to the House.

The chief arguments were that the bill will be unconstitutional and that great care must be exercised that the legislation shall not be made so drastic that it will work a hardship upon the railroads. Mr. Dunsmore briefly refuted all of these arguments and promised to do so at length at a future meeting.

Representative Cooper of Delaware, the veteran chairman of the Railroads Committee, was unable to be present and Representative Kless of Lycoming presided. Chairman Kless, Secretary Cochran of Armstrong and Representative Marvin of Pike repeatedly questioned the railway attorneys, Mr. Cochran in particular, tangling them up several times when he put questions to them regarding some of their assertions.

It is considered likely that the Hornsby trolley freight bill, which is upon the House calendar, will be closely scrutinized because of the statement made by Mr. Schaffer and may be held up for some time. It is not known just when the bill will be taken up. The House will likely meet Friday and two sessions a day are by no means improbable Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

COMMITTEES NAMED

For the Big Celebration of the Volunteer Firemen of Scottdale

THE FIRST WEEK OF JULY.

Many Attractions Are Planned for and the Committees Are Getting at Work Early for the Greatest Local Talent Fair Ever Held in the Mill Town. Other News Notes.

SCOTSDALE, Feb. 12.—The last meeting of the Scottdale Volunteer Fire Company was devoted to getting in shape the preliminary details for the street fair that the boys are going to hold in Scottdale during the first week of July. None but talent of a local nature will appear and from the canvass that has been made it developed that some extraordinary clever attractions will be on hand. And a show by local talent is ever a drawing card in any town. Frank Bodeheimer is down for an illusion show, and for his production of magic art, which is said to be extremely clever, a tent has been ranged for. Incidentally a merry-go-round will be hired for the entire week, and another motion picture for the securing of a first class moving picture show. A restaurant will be conducted by the firemen so there will be no lack of plenty to eat for those that the pangs of hunger seize upon. A country store is on the program and this will be a feature of both amusement and profit. A cane and knife rack will test the nerves and eye, and a minstrel show will give opportunity for the boys to show what they can do in black face and bones. A piano will be raffled off, a doll rack will be put up, and other amusements will be run. There will be no paddle wheels, however, or anything of that nature. A committee was instructed to have a dancing platform built and an amusement committee has in charge the securing of some attractions in the way of general amusements for every night of the week. The following committees were named: On advertising, W. N. Porter, W. Haines and Roy Baker; on tents, Joseph Steiner, Robert McNair and John Meitzer; on entertainment, Arthur Collins, Charles Shaner and John Mulhorne; on lumber, David Nez, John G. Darling, J. S. Sprinkle, J. S. Hamilton and J. F. Kasper; on large attractions, G. W. Sprinkle, Jack Hastings, E. McClain, Charles Musgrove and John Comp; small attractions, Ben S. Baldwin, Fred Farley, John Mulhorne, David Nez and Edward Gordon; to solicit money for the Fourth, W. N. Porter, S. M. Beatty, Joseph Steiner, M. Kelly and Arthur Collins; on finance, D. Griffith, David Nez, Jack Hastings, J. G. Darling, C. Haines, Roy Baker and Frank Wise. A committee was appointed to see the band and secure their services for the dancing pavilion, as follows: J. Sprinkle, H. Steiner, Earl Husher. A committee consisting of C. B. Knapp, Jesse Stoner and Paul Sprinkle were appointed with Secretary B. S. Baldwin to secure bids on a piano. W. N. Porter in behalf of S. M. Beatty and family extended their thanks to the company for their sympathy and kindness at the death of their son, James P. Beatty.

Constable Joseph Heffelfinger was high gun at the rifle shoot for chickens, ducks and geese at the Scottdale rifle range on Saturday. A pleasant little surprise party was arranged by Grace Porter for her smaller sister, Irene, at their home on Spring and Mulberry streets, yesterday afternoon, at which a number of little friends had a very enjoyable time, with music, games and a dainty lunch. Those present were Anna Grace Lynn, Laura Rose Webb, Katherine Thomas, Marguerite Lowry, Elizabeth Rhodes, Mary M. Grazier, Mildred Johnston, Rena Loucks, Mary Beck, Elizabeth Fleming, Silva Webb, Emma Engle, Gladys Pyte, Gladys Truxell and Isabella Hayes.

Robert Morris, chief engineer for the Keystone Coal & Coke Company of Greensburg, was a business visitor in Scottdale yesterday evening. A sledding party of 25 members in the big bobs belonging to George B. Kelly and Frank Frots drove over to the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Roberts, near Rankin school house on Saturday evening and had a merry time. The party was all made up of English residents and all English games and pastimes were revived and kept up until a late hour.

Miss Florence Anderson returned home on Sunday from a visit with the family of George C. McGill at Dawson. Mr. and Mrs. Sidaway and daughter and granddaughter of Cleveland, O., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. William Raybould and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sidaway, near the White school house. With John Sidaway, the oldest member of the family, this made a representation of four generations of the family together.

Oliver Fink of Central was visiting his father, E. S. Fink, a prominent farmer near town, over Sunday. Joseph Kenney is at Greensburg attending court as a jurymen this week.

J. B. Hogg of Connelville was in Scottdale on business Monday.

Melody Defeats Lewis. Valley Falls, R. I., Feb. 12.—Honey Melody of Boston, welterweight champion of the world, won the decision in the fourth round in a contest with Willie Lewis of New York. Lewis' seconds threw up the sponge.

NULL HOUSE FIRE.

Famous Old Hotel at Greensburg Has Narrow Escape.

GREENSBURG, Feb. 12.—The his tory old Null House, Greensburg's oldest hostelry, had a narrow escape from destruction last night. About 11 o'clock in a barber shop adjacent to the basement some towels had been left too near a gas fire and ignited. Quick work on the part of firemen who were nearby when the fire was discovered, saved the building. While historic and picturesque, the Null House is not an imposing structure, and its corner could be better graced by a more imposing structure, as it is a vital spot in Greensburg's business center. This is not a check, however, on the joy of Proprietor John House man, who today entertains his friends with a series of "what might have been" stories.

The (The P. McK. & O. Railway Company seems to have taken on a new lease of life since Col. Lloyd Huff has assumed control. Five new cars, costing $7,500, have been ordered, making ten of this size, the largest in service in Western Pennsylvania. The section of the road between Greensburg and Oakford Park will be double tracked in order to handle the big park business. A cut-off between Manor and Lewin will be built at an expense of $75,000, the directors announce.

Your home is your palace. That's where you receive your friends. That's where you do your living. Then why not make it cozy and inviting? You are a long time dead. Live while you are here.

It is so easy to furnish a home on our credit plan that we wonder why there is a shabby home within reach of our house.

There should not be one—no, not one! If there is a man or woman of limited means who desires and craves for a neat little home—it doesn't make any difference how small his or her income may be, we shall be glad to arrange matters so that making a home will be just as easy as it is for others more plentifully supplied with money.

Try it. Get acquainted with us and our methods. See what we have done for others. Our outfit business is growing wonderfully.

It's the modern way of furnishing a home. And we think we have made it simple, safe, sane, satisfactory, serviceable and sure. Whatever you do, do it right. Live while you live.

CHAPTER XIV.

As upon a world canopied with storm, hung with mourning purple and habited in black, did Mr. Filbert turn his morning face at 8 o'clock on Monday as he stepped to his daily duty at the Washington National Bank. Yet more than the morose frowns gloomed out from the lofty arch of his countenance. Was there not, beneath the mark of that darkling eye? Was there one, this man, to turn the other cheek? Little has he known of Norbert Filbert who conceives that this fiery spirit was easily to be quenched! Look upon the jaw of him and let him who dares maintain that people—even the very Pike themselves—were a kind of beast, when brought within a prodigious Norbert and rise on scabbard! In this his own metaphor is nearly touched: "I guess not. They don't run over me. Martin Pike better look out how he tries it!"

So Mother Nature, at her kindly task, good Norbert, goes for her own perfect inconsistency, and often when we are stabbed deep in the breast she directs us by this scratches in other parts, that in the life of these we may forget the greater hurt till it is healed. Thus, the remembrance of Norbert was not a hindrance to the more than a thousand of a Pike, with a pretty girl looking on (to say nothing of the arid Arp, who will fling the legend on a thousand winds), might well agonize you now, as, less hasty moments and at a safe distance, you brooded upon the piteous figure you cut. On the contrary, behold! You see no blood crimsoning the edges of the horrid gash in your panoply of self-esteem; you but smart and scratch the scratches, forgetting your wound in the hot itch for vengeance. It is an itch which will last (for in such matters your temper shall be steadfast), and let the great Goliath in the mean time beware of you! You ran last night. You ran—of course you ran. Why not? You ran to fight another day.

A bleak clerk sometimes has opportunities. The stricken fat one could not understand how it came about that he had blurted out the damning confession that he had visited Beaver Bend. When he tried to solve the puzzle, his mind refused to obey. He was angry and the terrors of his position nagged. Was he, like Joe London, to endure the ban of Canaan and, like him, stand excommunicated beyond the pale because of Martin Pike's displeasure? For Norbert saw with perfect clearness today what the Judge had done for Joe. Now that he stood in danger of a fate identical this came home to him. How many others, he wondered, would do as Martin had done and write notes such as he had received by the hand of Sam Warden late last night?

Dear Sir: This Martin, who, in the Canaanite, was a man of no small dress him as "Norbert." My father wishes me to state that after your remark yesterday afternoon on the subject of my behavior to himself later on he considers it impossible to allow you to call any more or to speak to any member of his household. Yours truly, MARTIN PIKE.

Erasures and restorations bore witness to a considerable doubt in Martin's mind concerning "Yours respectfully," but she had finally let it stand, evidently convinced that the plain signature, without preface, savored of an intimacy denied by the context.

"Dear sir!" repeated Norbert between set teeth. "Impossible to allow you to call any more!" These and other terms of his dismissal recurred to him during the morning, and ever and anon he looked up from his desk, his lips moving to the tune of those horrid phrases, and stared out at the street. Basilisk glaring this, with no Christian softness in it, not even when it fell upon his own grandfather, sitting among the angles within easy eye shot from the big window at Norbert's elbow. However, Colonel Filbert was not disturbed by the gaze of his descendant, being, in fact, quite unaware of it. The aged men were having a busy morning.

The conclusion was not what it had been. (See Arp and all his works.) There had come as the years went by a few recruits, but faces were missing. The two Tabor had gone, and Uncle Joe Dwyer could no longer lay claim to the patriarchship. He had laid it down, with a half sigh, and gone his way. Ekwow himself was now the oldest of the conspirator fathers, the colonel and Squire Bucklew pressing him closely, with Peter Bradbury no great time behind.

Today they did not plant their feet upon the brass rail inside the hotel windows, but scoured the genial weather outdoors and, as the summer custom was, tipped back their chairs in the shade of the western wall of the building.

"And who could of dreamed," Mr. Bradbury was saying, with a side glance of expectancy at Ekwow, "that Jonas Tabor would ever turn out to have a niece like that?"

Mr. Arp caused to fan himself with his wide straw hat and said grudgingly: "I don't see as Jonas has 'turned out'—not in particular. If he's turned at all lately I reckon it's in his grave, and I'll bet he has it in his grave of heart how much she must of spent ed by anxiety that they disregarded it, who entered the room and sat down to wait for the absentee. There were plenty of chairs in the office now, bookcases also and a big steel safe. But when evening came and the final gray of twilight had vanished from the window panes all had gone except one, a woman who sat patiently, her eyes upon the floor and her hands folded in her lap, until the footstep of the last of the others to depart had ceased to sound upon the pavement below. Then with a wordless exclamation she sprung to her feet, pulled the window shade carefully down to the sill and when she had done that struck a match on the heel of her shoe—a white white candle shot, not a small one and applied the flame to a gas jet. The yellow light flared up, and she began to pace the room haggardly.

The courtesan bell rang 3 and as the minutes following the last stroke pulsed themselves into silence she heard a footfall on the stairs and immediately relapsed into a chair, folding her hands again in her lap, her expression composing itself to "passivity," for the step was very much lighter than Joe's.

A lady beautifully dressed in white dimly appeared in the doorway. She hesitated at the threshold, not apparently, because of any timidity (her expression being too thoughtfully assured for that), but almost immediately she came in and seated herself near the desk, acknowledging the other's presence by a slight inclination of the head.

This grave courtesy caused a strong, deep flush to spread itself under the rouge which unevenly covered the woman's cheeks as she bowed elaborately in return. Then, hurriedly, during a protracted silence, she took stock of the new comers from a tip of her white head directly to the blue lace and pink roses upon her wide white hat, and the side-long gaze lingered marvelously upon the quiet, delicate hands, slender and finely expressive, in their white gloves.

For two hands, unlike the lady's, began to flicker and quiver, and the silence continuing, she coughed several times to effect the purpose required by her sense of fitness before she felt it proper to observe, with a polite utter: "Mr. London seems to be a good while coming."

"Have you been waiting very long?" asked the lady.

"Ever since 6 o'clock!" "Yes," said the other, "that is very long."

"Yes, ma'am, it certainly is." The last broken, she felt free to use her eyes more directly and after a long, frank stare, exclaimed: "Why, you must be Miss Ariel Tabor, isn't you?"

"Yes," Ariel touched one of the roses upon Joe's desk with her finger tips—"I am Miss Tabor."

"Well, excuse me for asking, I'm sure it isn't any bushy head, and I said the other, remembering the names due one lady from another, 'But I thought it must be. I expect,' she added, with loud, inconspicuous laughter, 'there's not many in Canaan ain't heard you've come back.' She paused, laughed again, nervously, and then, less loudly, to take the edge of her abruptness, gradually 'tripping herself down to a pause, to let which she put forth, 'I might as well tell you we've been waiting.'"

"Yes," said Ariel.

"Yes, was waiting first of last week though, I don't mind run so much." This with more laughter—"I say in the house when it rains. Some people don't know enough to, they say. You've heard that saying, ain't you, Miss Tabor?"

"Yes," said Ariel.

"Well, I tell you," she exclaimed noisily, "there's plenty of ladies and gentlemen in this town that's like that!" Her laughter did not cease. It became louder and shriller. It had been until now a mere liberation of the conversation, leading to make her enter in Miss Tabor's presence, but as it increased in shrillness she seemed to be losing control of herself, as if her laughter were getting away with her. She was not far from hysteria when she stopped with a gasp, and she sat up straight in her chair, white and rigid.

"There!" she said, listening intently. "Ain't that him?" Steps sounded upon the pavement below, paused for a second at the foot of the stairs; there was a snap of a match, then the steps sounded again, retreating. She sank back in her chair heavily. "I was only some one stopping to light his cigar at the entry. It wasn't Joe London's step anyway."

"You know his step?" Ariel's eyes were fast upon the woman wonderingly.

"I'd know it tonight," was the answer, delivered with a sharp and painful giggle. "I got plenty reason to."

Ariel did not respond. She looked a little closer to the roses upon the desk, letting them touch her face and breathing deeply of their fragrance to neutralize a perfume which pervaded the room, an odor as heavy and cheap-sweet as the face of the woman who had substituted her handkerchief with it, a scent which went with her perfectly and as to her happily delirious; suited to her dimly dyed hair, to her soiled white shoes, to the hot red hat smothered in plumes, to the rustling and ingrained, to the fat, plaited rings, of which she wore a great quantity, though, surprisingly enough, the large diamonds in her ears were pure and of a very clear water.

It was she who broke the silence once more. "Well," she drawled, coming gently to the same theme, "better late than never, as the saying is. I wonder who it is gets up all them comical sayings? Apparently she had no genuine desire for light upon this mystery as she continued immediately: "If I had a gentleman friend that's always getting up on 'em, 'well' he says, 'the best of friends must part,' and 'thou shalt not be to the heart—' all kinds of cracks like that. He's a real comedian. And yet," she went on in an altered voice, "I don't like him much. I like her voice, I guess, and she's a good deal of a beauty, but she's a little too much for me."

The change of tone was so marked that Ariel looked at her keenly, to find herself surprised into pitying this strange client of Joe's, for tears had sprung to the woman's eyes and slid down the lids, where she had vainly to restrain them, and she had altered, too, like her voice, her face, and her mouth as if they had just been pinched there—the truth issuing from beneath her plucked simulations like a fragile mask revealed by the displacement of a heavy covering.

"I expect you think I'm a real fool," she said, "but I've been waiting so awful long, and I got a good deal of worry on my mind till I see Mr. London."

"I am sorry," Ariel turned from the roses and faced her and the heavy perfume. "I hope he'll come soon."

"I hope so," said the other. "It's something to do with me that keeps him away, and the longer he is the more it scares me. She shivered and set her teeth together. "It's kind of hard waiting. I certainly got my share of trouble."

"You don't think that Mr. London will be able to take care of them for you?"

"Oh, I hope so, Miss Tabor! If he can't, nobody can." She was crying openly now, wiping her eyes with her musk soaked handkerchief. "We had to send for him yesterday afternoon."

"To come to Beaver Bend, do you mean?" asked Ariel, leaning forward.

"Yes, ma'am. It all began out there—last night. It began before that with me. It was all my fault. I deserve all that's come to me. I guess, I do."

She checked herself sharply, but after a moment's pause continued, encouraged by the grave kindness of the delicate face in the shadow of the wide white hat. "I oughtn't to of went," she repeated. "Oh, I reckon I'll never never even enough to keep my mouth shut, even when I see it coming! But the gentleman, that of mine—Mr. Nashville Cory's his name, but he can't hit awful hard, and Mr. Cory let out a scream, and I see his legs go off right in Mr. Pike's face. I thought, but it wasn't, it only seemed so. Most of the other gentlemen and run, but Mike made a dive and managed to knock the gun to one side just barely in time. Then Mike and three or four others that come out from behind things separated 'em, both of 'em right in the air, and each other. They looked Mr. Cory up in Mike's room and took Mr. Pike over to where they hit the horses. Then Mike sent for Mr. London to come out to talk to my husband and take care of him—he's the only one can do anything with him when he's like that—but before Mr. London could get there Mr. Pike broke loose and ran through a cornfield and got away, but they couldn't find him. And Mr. Cory jumped through a window and slid down into one of Mike's barrels, so they'd both gone. When Mr. London came he only stayed long enough to hear what had happened and started out to find Happy—that's my husband. He's bound to keep them apart, but he hasn't found Mr. Pike yet or he'd be here."

Ariel had sunk back in her chair. "Why should your husband hide?" she asked in a low voice.

That's the way it is with the law. Mr. Cory could wipe out their old score and get off scot free.

"Surely not!" "Yes, ma'am, that's the way it would be. And when Mike told me that Mr. Cory had not met me out there just to prove my husband I went straight up to him and began to give him a piece of my mind. I didn't talk loud, because I was one to make a disturbance and start trouble the way some do, and right while I was talking we both see my husband pass the window. Mr. Cory gave a kind of yelling laugh and put his arm round me just as Mr. Pike came in the door. And then it all happened so quick that you could hardly believe it was what Mr. Pike said. He found afterward, and prompted Mr. London that he wouldn't come out there, but he took too much—you could see that by the look of him—and forgot his promise—forgot everything but me and Cory, I guess."

"To come right up to us, where I was trying to get away from Cory's arm—as the left one he had around me and the other behind his back—and neither of 'em said a word. "To come right up to us, where I was trying to get away from Cory's arm—as the left one he had around me and the other behind his back—and neither of 'em said a word. Cory kept on laughing loud as he could, and Mr. Pike struck him in the mouth. He's little, but he can hit awful hard, and Mr. Cory let out a scream, and I see his legs go off right in Mr. Pike's face. I thought, but it wasn't, it only seemed so. Most of the other gentlemen and run, but Mike made a dive and managed to knock the gun to one side just barely in time. Then Mike and three or four others that come out from behind things separated 'em, both of 'em right in the air, and each other. They looked Mr. Cory up in Mike's room and took Mr. Pike over to where they hit the horses. Then Mike sent for Mr. London to come out to talk to my husband and take care of him—he's the only one can do anything with him when he's like that—but before Mr. London could get there Mr. Pike broke loose and ran through a cornfield and got away, but they couldn't find him. And Mr. Cory jumped through a window and slid down into one of Mike's barrels, so they'd both gone. When Mr. London came he only stayed long enough to hear what had happened and started out to find Happy—that's my husband. He's bound to keep them apart, but he hasn't found Mr. Pike yet or he'd be here."
